INDIA'S NEW WORLD

India 2015

2 x 60' HD

Against a mosaic backdrop of teak forest, farmland and bustling villages this film explores the extraordinary story of Asia's last lions living in 21st century India and their recovery from near extinction. A century ago, a mere 20 individuals remained. Afforded sanctuary in the form of Gir Forest National Park, numbers of these critically endangered big cats rose slowly and they now number over 400. But the lions have outgrown their sanctuary and have spilled out into the surrounding countryside and villages. Here, a unique relationship has developed between the large predators and the people, revealing a story of survival and tolerance. For over 20 years, the Manas National Park was the unwelcome host for India's Bodo rebellion. As conflict raged, rebels swept over the park ravaging the landscape and poaching wildlife for food and money. The results were catastrophic — some animal populations halved while others were eradicated from the park altogether. In this uplifting story we discover how some of the rebel fighters gave up their weapons of war and instead turned their attention to safeguarding the park and its inhabitants.

Wild Workers is an amusing approach to this common "curse" of humans and animals. If you think you have been working overtime lately you should take a look at some of the hard working species featured in our TV series, Wild Workers: the delicate and constant work of the Black-headed Weaver, the witty hammer-rock-wielding of the Bearded Capuchin Monkeys or the tireless building efforts of the North American beaver...

ABANDONED ENGINEERING

Great Britain 2018—2019

32 x 60' HD

The world is peppered with examples of incredible engineering projects and buildings designed to make life easier for those that used them, amaze those that came to see them — and make money for those that ordered, designed and built them.

They were the stuff of dreams. Often, as we'll see in these shows, on occasion enormous engineering problems had to be resolved, obstacles overcome and new innovations employed just to get them built in the first place.

Alas, a great number of these remarkable structures have now been abandoned, cast aside like enormous expensive out-of-date toys, never to be used in the ways for which they were intended. Some fell prey to political arguments and financial problems or were perhaps unable to defy the passing years, the pace of new technologies or the vagaries of fads and fashion. Others failed because they were simply monstrous testimonies to the vanity, greed and sheer stupidity of the people that built them.
