Panel Discussion: "Content for Children and Teens in Russia – Trends and Prospects"

As the Year of the Family in Russia draws to a close, substantial focus has been placed on promoting family values and creating new content for children and teens. This discussion will cover what goals have been achieved, the opportunities and support programs available for producing family-oriented content, and the challenges faced by the children's film and animation sectors. Experts will debate whether the state is truly invested in this segment's growth and discuss the market's prospects in Russia, including the development of children's cinema in the regions.

Topics for Discussion:

- State Support and Industry Challenges
How has the government's attitude toward the industry evolved this year? What successes can we celebrate, and what challenges remain in the industry? When can we expect to see these issues addressed?
- Market Prospects for Children's and Family Content
What are the outlooks for the children's and family content markets in Russia, and how do they differ? What can we expect from producers in these segments, and what are the current audience demands?
- Government Support and Production Standards
Can the state support the industry? What support programs are available, and how can high-quality children's content be created? What benchmarks should guide this effort?
- Successful Cases and Trends
Which successful cases stand out in this segment, and why do they perform best? What are the viewing trends, and where is children's content headed?
- Government Involvement in Creative Processes
Should the government intervene in the production process and regulate creative processes in the youth segment? Is there a need for standards, a new cultural code, or specific guidelines for children's content? Should this be limited to family content?

Moderator: Igor Shibanov - Producer, Expert, General Director of the children's channel "SuperHeroes" and distribution company KinoGo.

"Music School" Special Screenings (Yamini Films, India)

New Indian film directed and produced by Paparao Biyyala.

This heartfelt 11-song musical explores the pressures placed on children by India's education system and by parents who prioritize academic success over creativity, leaving little room for the arts. Against this backdrop, music and drama teachers Mary and Manoj dream of staging "The Sound of Music" with their students in Hyderabad. Facing resistance from parents, they eventually find support from some who allow them to escape to Goa for focused rehearsals. Amid the preparations, Manoj's feelings for Mary grow, though complicated by her ex, Albert. The journey takes an unexpected turn when one young actress attempts to elope, putting the entire play in jeopardy. Yet, against all odds, Mary and Manoj manage to bring their cast back together for a successful performance.
